CULTURAL SUGGESTIONS

All bulbs should be planted in rich soil, and for best results old soil is preferable. If stable manure is used when planting is done, it must be old, well rotted material, as otherwise it is injurious to bulbs.

Soil must be well drained and bulbs may be planted in groups of six, twelve or more; or many times in large numbers for intense color effect.

When ground is frozen in late fall, cover with a few inches of coarse material or leaves, and do not uncover until danger of the ground freezing in the spring is past.
